SAGINAW

City to provide code enforcement in Zilwaukee

The city of Saginaw has decided to enter into a cooperative agreement with neighboring city Zilwaukee to provide code enforcement services.

Saginaw Chief Inspector John Stemple explained to City Council on Monday that Zilwaukee recently added an ordinance similar to Saginaw's that requires owners of rental properties to register with the city.

"In fact, they took the exact language of our ordinance and adopted it in the city of Zilwaukee," Stemple said.

He said the agreement with Zilwaukee marks the fourth such agreement Saginaw has made with neighboring communities to provide code enforcement, planning and zoning services. The city also contracts with Swan Creek, Spaulding and Saginaw townships.

Stemple said those deals, which Stemple said are serviced in-house by existing city staff, result in about $57,000 in additional revenue for the city government.

"In financial terms, that's one position in my office," he said. "And these agreements always result in cost savings to other jurisdictions."

The revenue coming back to Saginaw from those neighboring communities, Stemple said, allows the city to support a position "that we may or may not be able to support otherwise."

No individual is devoted to any particular jurisdiction, he said. Instead, the existing city staff shares the duties in the neighboring townships as-needed.

Stemple said, based on the map he has of rental properties in Zilwaukee, he estimates about 70 such properties exist in the city.

As stated in the agreement, Saginaw will be compensated for code enforcement activities on an as-needed basis, with half of the revenue generated by the new ordinance's registration fees. Stemple said he expects the agreement to generate between $2,000 and $3,000 annually.
